As the path gets longer, load increases, visualization capacity is exceeded, and accuracy declines. The spatial field model predicts this decline very accurately by positing three key components of visualization capacity. These components are implemented using ACT- R's declarative memory processes.

Hereinafter, when referring to the D/NGA as functional manager of the NSG and/or GEOINT, the term FM/NSG will be used. Title 10 U.S. Code Â§467 establishes the deï¬nition of GEOINT. This document serves as a framework for understanding GEOINT and provides the background necessary for customers to fully leverage GEOINT.

Functional Managerâ€™s Message

â€¢ Spatial data are data that have a spatial component, it means that data are connected to a place in the Earth. â€¢ A Geographic Information System integrates hardware, software, data, and people to capture, manipulate, analyse and display all forms of geographically referenced information or spatial data.
