The Satires (Latin: Satirae or Sermones) is a collection of satirical poems written by the Roman poet, Horace. Composed in dactylic hexameters, the Satires explore the secrets of human happiness and literary perfection. Published probably in 35 BCE and at the latest, by 33 BCE, the first book of Satires represents Horace's first published work.

Satires (Horace) - Wikipedia

Horace's poetic output is prolific and spans a range of literary genres. His first venture was a first book of Satires, written in hexameters and published in 35 BCE. . . . The second book of Satires, along with a book of three iambic poems called Epodes, followed soon after the crucial battle of Actium (31 BCE) that established Octavian in sole power.

Description : The Satires of Horace (65-8 BC), written in the troubled decade ending with the establishment of Augustus' regime, provide an amusing treatment of men's perennial enslavement to money, power, glory and sex. Epistles I, addressed to the poet's friends, deals with the problem of achieving contentment amid the complexities of urban life, while Epistles II and the Ars Poetica discuss Latin poetry - its history and social functions, and the craft required for its success.

According to a local tradition reported by Horace (Satires 2.1.34), a colony of Romans or Latins had been installed in Venusia after the Samnites had been driven out early in the third century. In that case, Horace could have felt himself to be Roman though there are also indications that he regarded himself as a Samnite or Sabellus (Epistles 1.16.49).
