A perforation in the context of oil wells refers to a hole punched in the casing or liner of an oil well to connect it to the reservoir. In cased hole completions, the well will be drilled down past the section of the formation desired for production and will have casing or a liner run in separating the formation from the well bore. The final stage of the completion will involve running in ...

In chemistry, an oxidizing agent (oxidant, oxidizer) is a substance that has the ability to oxidize other substances â€” in other words to cause them to lose electrons. Common oxidizing agents are oxygen, hydrogen peroxide and the halogens.. In one sense, an oxidizing agent is a chemical species that undergoes a chemical reaction that removes one or more electrons from another atom.
